International Game Technology and WMS Gaming, Inc. have settled two related patent lawsuits, the first of which was originally filed in the Federal District Court on May 17, 1994. The lawsuits related to IGT's claim that WMS infringed upon the Telnaes Patent for virtual reel technology. Under the settlement agreement, the parties have dismissed the lawsuits and WMS has agreed to pay IGT approximately $28.67 million.

December 9, 1999

International Game Technology commenced its tender offer for up to 11 million shares of IGT common stock at $21 per share, representing approximately 13% of the Company's outstanding shares. The offer will expire at 12:00 midnight, New York City time, on Friday, January 7, 2000, unless it is extended by the Company. The terms of the tender offer will be described more fully in the offering materials to be distributed to IGT's stockholders. Under the terms of the tender offer, IGT's stockholders will be given the opportunity to sell up to 11 million shares of IGT common stock at $21 per share.

MARKET DATA

Company Description

International Game Technology (IGT) is engaged in the development and production of computerized gaming products. The Company operates in three lines of business: product sales, proprietary gaming and lottery systems. Product sales encompass the development, manufacturing, marketing, distribution and sales of computerized gaming products and systems. The proprietary gaming segment is comprised of IGT's wholly owned gaming operations, which include activities that the Company performs on behalf of its strategic marketing alliances, as well as its unconsolidated joint venture activities. Lottery systems consist of the development, manufacturing, operation and sale of online lottery and pari-mutuel systems and related equipment.
